

YOUNG DRIVERS ARE A THREAT TO ROAD SAFETY

Young drivers are constantly being criticized in today's society for what is wrong with our highways and streets. While some people believe that young drivers are reckless on roads, others think that people of any age can pose a threat.

The major disadvantage young people have is lack of experience. As most of them recently started driving, they could find themselves in situations where they start panicking because they do not know what to do. Young people are also more prone to drinking alcohol. Driving while intoxicated can cause many troubles, such as car crashes or speeding tickets.

However, young drivers are usually more careful behind the wheel. Those that just got their license will follow more rules because of the fear of making a mistake. Giving a young person a car also gives their family more time for their activities. Some parents always have to drive their kids around which affects their time schedule.

In conclusion, young drivers definitely have their flaws. They lack experience and are more likely to drink alcohol and drive. On the other hand, young drivers are more careful behind the wheel and having a car gives their parents more time for themselves. In my opinion young people should be allowed to drive if they are mature enough.
